(Obubonero 20)

On my way to school I was embarrassed by a taxi conductor who made a bad joke about me. He said I was too big to be in a uniform and that at a time like this, I was supposed to have got married and I would be having about three kids. Everyone in the taxi seemed amused and some even laughed openly. I wondered how any of them would have felt had they been in my shoes. I had had a terrible day in school and failed to concentrate. During break time, I moved out of class to go find something to eat. When I reached the canteen, I found a student who hated me. I had overheard her saying that she did not like the way I walked, talked, and dressed. She added that I was too mature to be in school. I was torn in pieces but swallowed my potato

When I reached home, I was cold and felt like I should sit on the fence on matters concerning home. I rushed to my bedroom and took a nap. While on my bed, I had someone calling me from a distance. It was my sweet mother. She inquired of what had gone wrong but I told her a lie. I was troubled by the conductor's comments because I didn't what to do about my weight.

'How do I lose weight? She I let people know how I feel every time they torture me with weight issues? This is too much and I am tired of the situation. I definitely have to find a solution about this.' She thought aloud.

Later on I sat my mother down and we had to discuss a way forward which I believe would work for me.
