NEMA says all people claiming to have possessed land titles in Lubigi wetland after 1998 are having irregular titles. “Despite reminders and written notices, people did not leave peacefully, so we had no choice but to inconvenience them to have them leave. Different categories of infrastructure are not yet down. This doesn't mean they may not come down. The operations are ongoing," said NEMA's Executive Director, Dr. Akanwasah Barirega, during a television interview.

Lubigi wetland restoration which started in May 2024, has continued amidst mixed reactions on the wetland occupancy and the manner of eviction. The restoration now at 20% intends to have at least 1,526 acres of the degraded wetlands restored in the areas of Nansana, Nabweru, Bwaise, Busega and Kyengeru among others.

Over 1,000 illegal occupants of the wetland mainly homestead have far been evicted since the beginning of the exercise.

According to Dr. Barirega, the eviction exercise of occupants in Lubigi wetland is guided by all laws and all those being evicted are illegal occupants although some claim to be bona fide occupants with land titles. He said since 1995 when the constitution first protected or mainstreamed the protection of wetlands, people have had titles even before 1995 and have lost ownership of their land titles.
